Writing a successful research proposal requires strong research skills, content knowledge, writing proficiency, and organizational ability. The workshop provides postdoctoral candidates and (if places are available) doctoral students with the background, skills, and key steps necessary to develop a competitive funding proposal.

Developing a strong research idea and considering funding resources is as important as understanding the elements of a proposal package. By writing and reviewing typical grant components, participants learn how to outline a grant proposal from start to finish.

Due to the ongoing corona pandemic, universities and research institutions are still operating under restrictions. Therefore, the workshop on Proposal Writing will be an online course including a modular, blended-learning structure of:

- Video-conferences (Zoom)
- Self-study videos (Vimeo)
- Exercises and paperwork (alone or with partner/peers in breakout rooms in Zoom)
- References, samples, and guidelines (Dropbox)
